APPRECIATION

The members of the Executive Committee of the Fort Stockton Centennial say "Thank You."

We are grateful to the many hundreds of people who have done so much to assure the success of our Centennial observance. To committee workers, those who have joined the orders of the "Brothers of the Brush" and the "Sisters of the Swish", advertisers in this program, members of our show cast, and all others who have added to the community effort.

We feel that the Centennial will be tremendously successful both as an entertainment event and as a vehicle to weld closer together the many economic and cultural forces within our fine community. We trust that the work done in this community enterprise will help to carry us into the second century of Fort Stockton's growth as a closer-working and more harmonious group.

To one and all — "Many Thanks"!

DEDICATION

This program, outlining details of the celebration of Fort Stockton's Centennial, is respectfully dedicated to the intrepid pioneer men — and Women — who have blazed many trails across the great Trans-Pecos country of which Fort Stockton has been the hub for many generations.

The early Spanish explorers, the intrepid Texas and American frontiersmen, the emigrants to California and the men who "carried the mail", the soldiers who guarded this area and gave literal meaning to the name of our community, the early families who settled about Comanche Springs, the intrepid early-day ranchmen and those mercantile and professional people who supplied the needs, the citizens of Spanish-speaking ancestry who added much to the culture and color of the community, the men who enriched the county with exploration, discovery and production of oil and gas, the farmers who have made Fort Stockton a rich oasis for many years — to all of these we express our gratitude for their part in laying the solid foundation on which our thriving and growing community has grown, and will continue to progress.

WE JOIN IN A SALUTE TO

SENATE RESOLUTION NO. 359

WHEREAS, On March 23, 1859, Camp Stockton, renamed Fort Stockton on May 23, 1860, in honor of United States Senator Richard F. Stockton of New Jersey, was established near historic Comanche Springs in the undulating, treeless plain of what is now Pecos County, Texas, to protect overland transportation and the United States mail; and

WHEREAS, With the secession of the Southern States, the soldiers were withdrawn from Fort Stockton on April 18, 1861, and following the close of the War Between the States, it was regarrisoned on July 7, 1867, and maintained until 1886 when it was finally abandoned; and

WHEREAS, From the earliest days of the existence of the fort, it was destined to become the fore-runner of a thriving West Texas community - the center of vast irrigation farming, extensive livestock raising and oil and gas production, thereby contributing to the economy of the state; and

WHEREAS, Nestling among the familiar mesas West of the Pecos lies the county seat of the great County of Pecos - now soon to observe, by appropriate activities, the centennial of the founding of the old fort and its successor, the City of Fort Stockton; and

WHEREAS, It is the desire of the Senate of Texas to join with her sister-communities of Pecos County to recognize the century of progress that has followed the early struggles and recurring economic adjustments of the founding fathers of the vast Trans-Pecos country, to express its hope and good wishes for the continued forward march of the dauntless and self-reliant sons and daughters of those intrepid pioneers and to say to them that "men's homage and their love shall never cease to follow them"; now, therefore, be it

RESOLVED, By the Senate of Texas, that the citizens of Fort Stockton and of Pecos County be and they are hereby extended the congratulations of this Body on their one hundred years of achievement and their contributions to the development of the great Trans-Pecos area of the State of Texas; and that copies of this Resolution, under the Seal of the Senate, be forwarded by the Secretary of the Senate to the Mayor of the City of Fort Stockton and to the County Judge of Pecos County for their appropriate disposition.

Charles W. Caniney
President of the Senate

I hereby certify that the
the Senate on April 15, 1959.

Whatever happened to the windmill??

Old "High Lonesome" has virtually disappeared from the rural scene along with the wood stove, cistern and kerosene lamp, swept into obscurity by rural electrification. They are remnants of a romantic past. In their place is the new way of life that electricity brings.

No one can say what electrical marvels the future holds. But hundreds of thousands of rural Texans know that the Rural Electric Cooperatives they own, operate, and enjoy are equal to the task. With nearly a quarter century's experience behind them, these elements of democracy, if unhampered, can continue the great service for which they were founded: Rural Electrification

In the late 1920's, Ohio Oil's Yates "A" 30 well blew in — a gusher. Today — 31 years later — the same well, producing under modern conservation techniques, is enjoying a long and useful life.

Conservation started here

Pecos County was the site. The Ohio Oil Company had discovered prolific production in the Yates field in 1927. Within a few years other operators were on the scene to develop the field along with Ohio Oil. After studying reservoir conditions, petroleum engineers concluded that wide open production wasn't the best way to get the most oil out of the ground. Ohio Oil and the Yates operators submitted a plan for allocation of the field's production before the Texas Railroad Commission and received approval. This was the first time the Railroad Commission took part in oil production regulation, paving the way for modern conservation methods.

Fort Stockton's First 100 Years

By Clayton W. Williams, Sr.

THE BACKGROUND OF FORT STOCKTON

The great junction of State and Federal highways, at Comanche Springs, Fort Stockton, was once the camping grounds of the Jumanos Indians, the fishing and recreation oasis for the Mescalero Apaches, and a rest camp of the Comanche and Kiowa Indians, and their captives on the great Comanche War Trail. It was a great lay over and trade stop on the Chihuahua, Indianola trail, which carted millions of dollars worth of bullion to the southeast. It was one of the last frontier towns in Texas. Other than Fort Davis, it is the oldest town between Fredericksburg and Presidio.

INDIANS

For 12,000 years some form of human habitation has existed in the sand regions adjacent to the Pecos River, and this area.

But of printed record, the Jumanos Indians inhabited the regions from the Rio Grande River, eastward to northeastern Texas, from the early dates of the Spanish expeditions until they were eradicated in this area by the Apache Indians who had moved down from the regions of Canada.

By 1808, the Comanche Indians had moved down from the Rocky Mountains to occupy the country over the great plains from the Arkansas River to the Pecos River as far south as Live Oak Creek.

The Mescalero Apache then occupied the mesa and sierra countries west of the Pecos River in eastern New Mexico, western Texas and northeastern Mexico. The Lipan Apaches operated from San Antonio to the site of San Angelo across to Live Oak Creek, Tunas, Independence and Myers Springs to the Rio Grande River. That was the general location of these Indians in their last resistance to the Anglo-American progress. Their meager subsistence was obtained from the game, fish, and plant life of the area.

SPANISH EXPLORATION

The first Spanish exploration in the vicinity was that of the unfortunate

Cabeza de Vaca and his two companions. Shipwrecked near Port La Vaca, they were captured by the Indians in 1535. They were traded from one Indian tribe to another, in a westward direction and passed across the lower Pecos River to arrive at the site of Presidio.

Most of these Spanish expeditions were for the purpose of making treaties with the Indians and to establish friendly trade relations.

Espejo and his party, in the year of 1582, contacted the Pecos Indians, located east of Santa Fe, traveled down the Pecos River to either Toyah Creek or Salt Crossing and made their way back to the site of Presidio by way of the Davis Mountains. Sosa's party of 180 men, women and children in search of gold and silver, moved up from Saltillo to the Devils River, crossed over to the Pecos River and continued up that river to the vicinity of Santa Fe in 1590.

Juan Dominguez de Mendoza, in 1683, at the request of the Jumanos Indians, moved down the Rio Grande River from Ysleta to negotiate a peace treaty with the Jumanos Indians on the Conchos River near the site of San Angelo.

Along with Mendoza's party was Frey Lopez, who gave names to localities and performed the requisite religious ceremonies on the trip. Their trip carried them by the Leon (Panther) water holes to Comanche Springs, the site of Fort Stockton, which they named "San Juan del Rio" (St. John of the River). The date of their arrival here was January 10th, 1684.

Officially there is no known Spanish expedition which visited Comanche Springs subsequent to Mendoza's trip in 1684.

COMANCHE WAR TRAILS

From 1766 to 1873, the Comanches rode on that long trek from the Arkansas River to the regions of Chihuahua, Coahuila and Durango to raid, plunder and massacre the defenseless Mexican peons. The scattered haciendas of the Feudal Spanish were easy prey for their vandalism. Many Mexican girls and women were taken to slave and bear children for them while the scalps of their Mexican brothers, fathers and husbands hung on the same wigwams or in the same rancheria.

The time for these raids became so well known that the Indians called one September moon, the Mexican moon. Among the Mexicans that time was known as the Comanche moon.

Even today, those deep worn trails located between Horsehead Crossing and Agua Bonita, of the Comanche horsemen, can be seen leading into Fort Stockton. Fifty years ago the trail from Comanche Springs down into Chihuahua could be followed by the large number of sun baked human, horse and stock bones which were strewn along its path. The early Anglo-American travelers through the site of Fort Stockton made especial note of the skeletons lying around the perimeter of the Comanche springs.

ANGLO AMERICAN PROGRESS EXPLORATION

Unaware of the Indian trails in this country, in 1848, Sam Highsmith and Colonel Jack Hays with rangers and Seminole Indians traveled through this area in an attempt to find a route from Austin and San Antonio, to Paso del Norte.

In 1849, Whiting and his party established what was later known as the lower route from San Antonio through the site of Comanche Springs, Limpia Canyon, and on to El Paso.

GOLD RUSH

Before Whittings return, the Gold Rush emigrants were pushing through. Two infamous caravans were among those numerous wagon trains of emigrants heading west. Glanton's heavily armed horsemen rode through Comanche Springs, the Davis Mountains, Fort Leaton on down to Chihuahua to enter the Mexican service of procuring Apache scalps.

A forged letter of credit applied by a man by the name of French in San Antonio was the means by which a grandiose equipped caravan of emigrants was transported from San Antonio, through Comanche Springs to El Paso. Then the creditors levied on the equipment, the emigrants were stranded and the perpetrators escaped into Mexico.

Indians were troublesome to some caravans, but especially to small unprotected groups. All along the route, emigrants and animals were picked off by the Indians. Four emigrants were surrounded and killed by over 100 Indians at Tunas Springs. Here they desperately attempted to defend their lives behind a small quickly constructed barricade of rocks.

Skillman and Big Foot Wallace soon were operating the Jack Ass mail and stage line across from San Antonio to El Paso. Hardly a spring, water hole, or treacherous pass existed where some Indian incident had not happened.

The Overland mail was commenced in 1857 and operated over the rough southern route. Two years later, the Butterfield altered its route from Horsehead Crossing to come by the new Fort Stockton.

FORT STOCKTON

Company H of the First Infantry occupied Camp Stockton on March, 1859. A special experiment to test the practical use of the camel in this dry, parched, lechuguilla country was started out of Fort Stockton. From the headquarters at Camp Van Camp, the Pecos Expedition, with 4 companies of cavalry moved down from their camp through Fort Stockton to punish Indians in the Carmel Mountains in Mexico. A second camel experiment returned through Fort Stockton in 1860.

THE CIVIL WAR

Texas withdrew from the Union and by agreement the United States troops moved out as the Confederates moved in. Baylor and his Confederate troops marched west to occupy Forts Hudson, Lancaster, Stockton, Davis, Quitman and Bliss. Captain Cood Adams and a detachment occupied Fort Stockton. Apache Nicolas and his Indians raided beef herds, murdered various parties and raided the Musquez ranch. The Fort Davis troops followed and were ambushed. The Adams company out of Fort Stockton moved down to trail and find the remains of that Fort Davis company.

When the Confederates were getting well established in New Mexico, the Texans withdrew their troops from Forts Lancaster, Stockton, Davis and Quitman. The line of supply to the Confederate army under Sibley in New Mexico was stopped. The Apache and Comanche took over the regions west of the Pecos River. Only Skillman, with a meager crew maneuvered the line of communication between the Confederate Texans, and El Paso Confederates. After his ammunition and supply wagons were destroyed by the Yankees in New Mexico, Sibley and his forces retreated back out of New Mexico, El Paso, Quitman, Davis, Stockton, and Langtry to San Antonio. With this caravan was Major George M. Frazer, his wife and baby, Annie Frazer. Our Fort Stockton museum is now named for Annie Frazer Riggs. A portion of the California Column, the Yankee army, advanced from El Paso through Fort Stockton, along the southern route to Lancaster where they were surprised and defeated.

RE-ESTABLISHMENT AFTER THE CIVIL WAR

Wagon trains quickly took up commerce from east Texas to El Paso and encountered Indian trouble. The El Paso train was ambushed in Limpia Canyon. The Baker train with salt pork and pecans was ambushed just west of the Pecos River. Indians attacked the east-bound stage west of Fort Stockton. After the loss of several men, the remnants of that stage walked into the deserted Fort Stockton. The westbound stage party successfully for several days withstood the attack of Indians at Tunas Springs. These and similar incidents were happening all along the western routes, so the United States re-established a number of forts, among which was Fort Stockton.

FORT STOCKTON BOOSTERS PREPARE TO BO.

The new Fort Stockton was constructed on what is now the Old Fort Addition to the city. It was built for the use of 4 companies of cavalry. Before the fort was occupied, two companies of the 41st Infantry marched in from south Texas to guard the supplies, workmen and teams employed in this building task. Mill street now crosses the location where the saw mill was erected.

Before the completion of these buildings, on July 7, 1867, Major General E. Hatch moved in with 269 enlisted men of the 9th Cavalry to camp on the banks of Comanche Creek. This was the headquarters for the 9th Cavalry with the remainder of those troops stationed at Fort Davis.

Peter Gallagher built his trading post, corrals with feed storage and a small hand dug well, just west of the present court house. The building fronted east and had an appearance similar to that of the old Santa Fe capitol. The old abandoned Fort Stockton premises were now subdivided by its owner into the first townsite addition of St. Gall. Here the Zero stone in the center of the plaza located just south of the court house relates to the beginning point of all old surveys of this immediate vicinity. In this townsite, a site was given for the present Catholic church just east of the court house. The James Hotel and stage corral occupied that space where now stands the annex to the court house.

George M. Frazer, Francis Rooney, Torres, and Garza and their families moved into Fort Stockton. Rooney's herd of cattle had been raided by the Indians on the Pecos River. The cowboys were killed and scalped and only a part of that herd was ever recovered by Rooney. Soldiers were frequently sent out from Fort Stockton to aid in the recovery of stolen stock and in an effort to chastise the Indians. Wagon trains loaded with grain, stock feed, and supplies for Fort Davis and Fort Stockton were occasionally attacked by the Indians near Koker-not Springs, Wild Rose Pass, Howard's Well, Johnson's Run, up the Pecos River from Lancaster, and other places. The army patrols had frequent encounters with the Indians. With the driver dead from an arrow in the middle of his forehead, a driverless stage coach was once pulled into Fort Stockton by a team of mules.

Pecos County was created and organized in 1875. It encompassed all of that area now comprising Pecos, Reeves, Terrell counties and that portion of Val Verde county now located west of the Pecos River. The following officials served in that first commissioners' court: George M. Frazer, Judge; Francis Rooney, Commissioner Precinct 3; Cesario Torres, Commissioner of Precinct No. 2; Hipolito Carrasco, Commissioner of Precinct No. 4; E. W. Bates, clerk, and Andrew Loomis, Sheriff.

Corbett, Herman Koehler, James Rooney, and H. H. Butz. The Corbett business was sold to Koehler and the bottom floor of the little community building is now what was once the Koehler Store and Saloon. The old Young store, with 1876 printed on its glass transom, is still standing.

In front of that store two cowboys clasped their left hands together and murdered each other over the question of a pair of boots. In either the Koehler or Young store, Sam Bass pulled the badger and got even with the tricksters. The town merchants were robbed by a part of Billy the Kid's gang. All these incidents happened in the year 1877.

By 1880, the great wagon trains and caravan commerce through Fort Stockton were coming to an end. The Texas and Pacific and the G. H. & S. A. railroads were both locating their tracks some 50 or 60 miles at the nearest point to Fort Stockton. Millions of dollars worth of silver and gold had been hauled up from Chihuahua to San Antonio and Indianola through Fort Stockton. Over 200 wagon trains had yearly made that round trip in addition to the great commerce going to and from El Paso. Fort Stockton was inhabited by 1,000 people, 90 percent of whom were Mexican. The citizens advertised the existence of four general stores, one hotel, a Catholic Church, Courthouse and jail, office, boot and shoe shop and a tailor shop. No saloons were mentioned, as all general stores carried supplies of drinks.

While such railroad location and building was in progress, Victoria and his Apaches slipped into Texas, outwitted the soldiers and rangers, and moved back into Mexico with a herd of cattle. With small loss to the Indians, Victoria's band had killed a number of soldiers, traveled over 100 miles into Texas with their squaws and children and then evaporated into Mexico. During this time, the Indians had cut the telegraph wires between Fort Davis and Fort Stockton and killed the stage attendants at Barilla.

To name the county seat of Pecos County an election was held on August 13, 1881 to decide between St. Gall and Fort Stockton. Sixty four votes were tallied for the name of Fort Stockton while St. Gall received only 30 votes.

With the G. H. & S. A. connecting from both rail ends at Sotol and Eagle's Nest, the underworld was traveling along in covered wagons and canvas tents to take part of the hard earned money from the gnarled hands of those workers by mean of liquor, lewd women and sharpers of the gambling games. Buzzing in with the insects looking for that easy "Long Green" and silver at Sotol City, Vinegaroon and Eagle's Nest was Roy Bean. There he was unofficially to act with the rangers backing, as Justice of the Peace of Pecos County. Only the following month was he appointed a Justice by the Commissioners at Fort Stockton, Texas on August 2, 1882. He did not post bond and qualify until December 6, 1882. His humorous and questionable judgements against the dead man for carrying a six-shooter, the Chinaman's murder, and others were too far away for the officials at Fort Stockton to conveniently do anything about them. The rangers account of bringing one prisoner from Eagle's Nest to Fort Stockton stated they were out 12 days and traveled 600 miles.

GENERAL MERCHANDISE of many kinds was sold to Pecos County settlers from the Herman Koehler store in 1894. Located just above one of the major springs on Comanche creek, it later became the Rooney & Butz store. Today a modern two-story Community Hall stands on the site.

A dug out represented the jail quarters in Fort Stockton from which some prisoners had dug out. The court house and jail were completed in 1883. In 1885, that portion west of the Pecos River now in the present Val Verde County was taken into that county.

By 1883, Fort Stockton's population "dwindled" down to about 15 white families and about 40 Mexican families, as a large part of its population moved off to occupy the adjacent railroad towns.

Fort Stockton, like other towns in those days, had its feuds, tough characters and murderers. Guns, black powder, bullets and whiskey were often mixed with fatal effects.

The fort was abandoned in 1886, on June 26-27, when Company G of the 3rd Cavalry and Company P of the 16th Infantry marched out of this forlorn little settlement on Comanche Springs.

The cowmen had moved into the county. Doak had several thousand head of cattle in the southern end of the county between Lozier Canyon and the Rio Grande. The T-5 outfit ran the country around Independence Springs on the Pecos River. Eighteen thousand cattle of the Mule Shoe brand grazed regions adjacent to the Tunas Springs. The T X outfit claimed 10,000 cattle west of the Pecos and 20,000 cattle east of the Pecos in the Horsehead Crossing area. The Frazer cattle watered around Leon Water Holes. The F. W. Young herd was grazing the salt grass along Diamond Y draw. Other outfits in the region were the N. A., SSS, Harris, and Childers. Even at this late date some herds were being driven from this place to Honey Wall, Kansas instead of sending them by freight trains.

The one room Heid Hotel accommodated only notables or sick persons, so the merchants allowed the cowboys and travelers to bed down in their stores where gaming often was carried on until 2:00 in the morning.

The sheepmen, Anderson, Downie, Purington and Paxton were locating their herds in the southeastern part of the county. The sheep were bedded down at night, within brush corrals, while in the surrounding area, the trappers caught predatory animals.

The long droll days with only an occasional customer at the stores, gave much time for the clerks to play tricks on each other and on unpopular customers. Mustard oil was rubbed on particular chairs. Rat traps were hidden to catch "mooching" hands. Saddles were reversed in position so that amused on-lookers could watch a drunk attempt to mount and ride off. Hilife was poured on tame horses to see surprised men take wild rides. Even the stray dogs and cats caught Hilife and tin cans on their rear ends for the general amusement of on-lookers.

The Riggs Hotel was completed by 1902 and leased for a while, and ultimately bought by Mrs. Annie Riggs. Drummers, a few bachelors and married couples occupied the rooms. A session of District Court could crowd the establishment for a few days with lawyers, jurymen and contesting parties. Single men were forced to share their rooms with strangers. A bath was provided only upon a request for the bath house key at the Rooney and Butz store, and a walk down to the wooden bath house located over the big Comanche Spring.

EARLY DAY SHOPPING was done by the ranchmen of a wide area at the frontier store located along the banks of Comanche Creek. In 1896 the F. W. Young store, left, was a flourishing establishment at the ford over the creek. It still stands. The old Koehler store is seen at the right, just above one of the deep springs.

Early in the 1900s the first automobile, a two cylinder revolving engine with those cylinders located in the turtle back, came in to town to break up a baseball game. All the teams and half the population were intimidated by that wagon, which came a shooting from both hips.

The lands subject to irrigation from Comanche Springs were bought up and resold to various men from out of state. This caused an increase in a number of small farms close to the town. The town was getting ready for the expected arrival of a railroad. To meet the railroads arrival on August 12, 1912, Commissioners Court of Pecos County had authorized the remodeling of the Court House and Jail at a consideration of $73,000.00. However, it was not until November 19th, 1912, the first official train entered Fort Stockton.

In World War I, Fort Stockton had many more casualties from the flu epidemic than from activities on the war front. Lieutenant Bob Fletcher, from the White and Baker ranch, had both his legs shot off in the last push against the Germans. During the same push, Henry Wheeler was gassed and A. O. Hinde's leg was shot off below the knee. The service men engaged in that war are honored with a monument placed in the plaza south of the court house.

WORLD WAR II

The young bodies of the victims of this war who were residents of Fort Stockton are now scattered all over Europe, Africa, and the far East. Among those seriously wounded and who managed to return to Fort Stockton was Juan Garza, the "Worst-Wounded Vet". The citizens of Fort Stockton generously subscribed money and gave him a home.

FIRST ALL GIRLS RODEO

In May, 1949, the first all girl rodeo was held in the Hood Mendel arena in Fort Stockton. Girls from many of the States came to participate in this event.

KOREAN WAR

In September, 1953, a hero's welcome and the gift of a new car greeted Abel Garcia, who had been captured by the China Communists in December, 1950.

RANCHES

Some of the finest stock ranges in the country exist in the south and east portions of Pecos County.

FARMS

Pumping water wells have caused 8,000 acres of cotton to be put into cultivation near Fort Stockton. From this crop, about 18,400 bales of cotton are marketed annually. The payroll from the growing, picking and marketing of this product reaches an amount of nearly $1,288,000.00 each year. As regular as the September moon, the imported braceros, with their tall pointed straw "sombros" and leather sandals, invade the cotton fields near Fort Stockton.

OIL

It is a co-incident that the oil business and Fort Stockton would be celebrating the same year 1959, as a centennial.

In Pecos County and over 300 miles from the nearest oil field, the "Miracle or Wonder" oil well was brought in on November 20, 1920 by J. W. Grant. At the shallow depth of 90 feet, and within the first 24 hours, it flowed several hundred barrels of heavy oil. This test was located some 15 miles north and a little east of Fort Stockton. The well soon ceased to flow and the boom died as suddenly as it had commenced.

The first real commercial oil production was established in Pecos County in the Yates oil field at the shallow depth of 1004 feet.

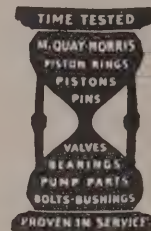

Culminating 28 years of development in Pecos County by the oil business, 446,730,635 barrels of oil have been produced within its limits. Two hundred and three oil reservoirs are shown to exist in 80 different oil fields in Pecos

GAS

The world's biggest gas well recorded with an estimated daily production of over 2,000,000,000 cu. feet daily is located 25 miles southeast of Fort Stockton. Big rich gas lines and processing plants make the gas from Pecos County available to the entire western portion of the United States.

The deepest oil test in the world was recently drilled at a location 10 miles east of Fort Stockton. Millions are being spent in this region to determine the possibility of undiscovered deep oil reservoirs within the immediate vicinity.

Coincides with our 31st Birthday - Almost!

The Pecos County State Bank opened for business in July 1928, and soon will begin its 32nd year of service to its growing number of customers and depositors.

We congratulate those responsible for planning an outstanding Centennial Celebration. We also join in paying tribute to the intrepid men and women of early days who laid so solid a foundation for the growth of today's Fort Stockton.
